Special Announcement

New Grant Awarded through the Second Chance Act

We are pleased to announce that the RFK National Resource Center has received a grant from the federal Office of Justice Programs under OJJDP's Second Chance Act (Ensuring Public Safety and Improving Outcomes for Youth in Confinement and While Under Community Supervision). This substantial award recognizes the impact of our historical and current Probation System Reform focus (through our seminal Probation System Review framework and extensive experience in the field) and seeks to extend that impact to more state and local jurisdictions throughout the country over the next three years. Through this work, we will grow our opportunities to improve the performance of our probation and juvenile justice systems so that we effectively protect public safety and every youth may realize a future of positive opportunities as if each one of these youth were our own. Additionally, we will be partnering with several distinguished national organizations with an outstanding history for implementing critical facets of juvenile justice system improvements. These include the National Juvenile Defender Center, National Center for Juvenile Justice, Impact Center at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and the expertise of Dr. Keith Cruise, Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at Fordham University.

This month, the RFK National Resource Center released Strengthening Interagency Collaboration: The Case for Pre-Adjudication Diversion. This new resource is co-authored by Probation System Reform Practice Network member Dr. John S. Ryals, Jr. (Jefferson Parish Department of Juvenile Services) and Blake Bascle (Jefferson Parish District Attorney's Juvenile Diversion Program). The use of pre-adjudication diversion in interagency processes can result in dramatic improvements in youth outcomes, community safety, system performance, and interagency collaboration. Benefits of using pre-adjudication diversion goals are rooted in the history of the juvenile justice system, demonstrated through proven intervention approaches, and embedded in adolescent development research. This practice brief describes how the use of pre-adjudication diversion is supported by current knowledge about youth development and highlights benefits of diversion programming in Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. Recent Event

Event Hosted by Mutual of America in NYC

On October 4, 2018, Mutual of America hosted a reception at their headquarters in New York City in support of RFK Children's Action Corps and the RFK National Resource Center. The event provided a valuable opportunity for John Tuell and Kari Harp to discuss the RFK National Resource Center's national reach in supporting the needs of youth in the juvenile justice system. We would like to thank board members Michael Watson and Chris Bailey for supporting and hosting this event which successfully connected non-profit, government and business leaders with the work of the RFK National Resource Center and RFK Children's Action Corps, thereby broadening support for our juvenile justice and child welfare system reform efforts. We look forward to similar events that will connect our work with passionate leaders, organizations and persons with philanthropic interests committed to system reform and improved youth outcomes.

RFK National Resource Center Welcomes Bob Bermingham to its Consulting Team

We are delighted to welcome Mr. Robert (Bob) A. Bermingham, Jr. to our family of consultant partners. Bob currently serves as the Director of the Court Services Unit for the Fairfax County Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court in Virginia. He has served in this capacity for the past nine years and possesses extensive executive and management leadership experience as well as direct practitioner expertise in juvenile justice operations and system reform spanning over 30 years. He has also served as a consultant, trainer, and teacher on the implementation of evidence-based, best practices in juvenile services, adult community corrections and domestic relation services. He is currently partnering with John A. Tuell in support of Clark County, Nevada and its efforts to implement recommended probation and juvenile justice reforms resulting from its completed Probation System Review. In the near future, Bob will serve as a consultant to our work supported by OJJDP's Second Chance Act Ensuring Public Safety and Improving Outcomes for Youth in Confinement and While Under Community Supervision.

Guide on the Disclosure of Confidential Information

The Massachusetts Court Improvement Program recently published its online Guide on the Disclosure of Confidential Information: For Professionals in Massachusetts Working with Children, Youth, and Families. Staff from the RFK National Resource Center served as consultants in the development of this guide and witnessed first-hand the dedicated efforts of a collaborative group of attorneys and practitioners, including Probation System Review Practice Network Member John Millett. The sharing of information among youth- and family-serving systems is a critical component of collaborative and effective work; however, a client's interest in the confidentiality of sensitive and personal information is just as vital. Understanding how to balance those interests and understanding the relevant laws and regulations is a complex or without technical assistance. Our Online Resource Library is designed to provide a user friendly experience for accessing our practical and informative resources, as well as presentations and materials from our events.

About Us

Robert F. Kennedy National Resource Center for Juvenile Justice, led by Robert F. Kennedy Children's Action Corps, uses proven models, frameworks, tools, resources and the best available research to serve local, state, and national leaders, practitioners and youth-serving agencies to improve system performance and outcomes for youth involved with the juvenile justice system. RFK National Resource Center focuses primarily on youth with prior or current involvement in both the child welfare and juvenile justice systems (dual status youth), the review and improvement of juvenile probation systems, and the use of a model framework to address the state and national laws and policies governing the exchange and sharing of data, information, and records for youth and families.
